

Peter

Dreadlocks belong to the Rastafari, but what's it like wearing them as a white non-Rastafarian? Peter feels that he has been embraced by Rastafarians, but that he is often discriminated against by non-Rastafarians.

Tess

Anthropology student Tess from Marken has travelled all over the world, but feels it's important that Marken's characteristic traditional dress doesn't die out. That's why she wears it when she takes people on tours of her birthplace.

Richard

Chief Shaka Zulu from New Orleans worked a whole year on this carnival outfit. The Tropenmuseum's exhibitions coordinator Richard talked to him about the religious symbolism in his costume.

Mostafa

When Mostafa fled Syria to come to the Netherlands he took his house keys with him, the only thing that was left of his home. Even so he hopes to go back some day.